National War Garden Commission : War Gardening and Home Storage of Vegetables (Classic Reprint) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised War Gardening and Home Storage of Vegetables (Classic Reprint):

By CHARLES LATHROP PACK, President National War Garden Commission AMERICAS responsibility for the worlds food supply did not stop with the ending of the war. In peace, as in conflict, this country must carry the burden of Europe's food problems. With the advent of peace these problems have become intensified. America is now expected to furnish the solution and this can be done only through the continued application of high pressure food production and unwavering food conservation. For two years of war the war gardeners of America produced foodstuffs which helped establish the balance of power between starvation and abundance. In the spring of 1918, General Haig declared, We stand with our backs to the wall. Of that call to the civilized world no phase was more vital than its interpretation and answer in terms of food. During that year the answer was given by the American people with true American spirit. The war gardeners of the United States responded with a vigor which carried the war gardeners over the top to victory. By the addition of more than five hundred million dollars of crop value to this country's food production they made it easier for America to feed her own people and the people of France and Belgium. The Victory Garden is now as vital as the war garden. Peace brings new food needs. In reclaiming territory from the enemy France and Belgium have greatly increased the number of their people who must be fed. By restoring these former expatriates to citizenship these countries have also assumed the burden of feeding them. This will mean a vast increase in the demands on America as the source of Europe's food supply in 1919. Europe cannot feed herself during the first year of reconstruction; Russia faced famine conditions in the winter of 1918- 1919, and Mr. Hoover says that the world's food shortage will last for another seven years.
