By Bernadette
Was not quite what I was expecting. Good reference book to have. I read it during the summer so maybe the timing just wasn't right for me to truly appreciate it. It did motivate me to have a goal of gardening year round, but now that the crappy weather is here, I'm not as stoked. Was a bit too wordy and not visual enough for me, but I'll give it another go this winter and maybe get motivated to set up my spring garden to be ready to do year round gardening next year.

By John A. Leraas
A really good source of information for gardeners interested in doing it better or understanding gardening in this wonderful part of our planet. Plentiful resources, references and literary sources. These are presented in a particularly useful and appealing fashion. Highly recommended

By Leah
I really love how strait forward this book is. The author tells you what you need to know so you can use it right away. Unlike some other books that give you a large amount of information that your brains says "there is a lot of information here were do I begin?." The author just jumps right in so you can learn what she learned, and try it for yourself. Learning is the best teacher.

In this revised edition of Winter Gardening, Binda Colebrook reveals the secrets of growing and harvesting fresh, flavorful produce during winter months in the maritime Northwest. Includes advice on how to select a winter growing site, what varieties to choose for hard weather and continuous harvest, how to utilize cold frames and cloches, and how to plan summer sowings to extend your growing season through the winter.

Binda's book introduced me and a whole lot of other people to the amazing reality of year-round gardening here in the maritime Northwest. After growing food in many other parts of the country, learning to cook from the garden in winter was a delicious miracle. Her techniques were simple and easy to apply, even if you didn't have help or much money....If you have a yen to grow cool season crops of your own, this book will be a splendid guide -- Ann Lovejoy in the Bainbridge , Oct. 17, 1998
